Inpatient Nurse Residency

The Inpatient Nurse Residency Program at UW Health is a year-long program to support the transition of new graduate nurses into professional nursing practice on inpatient units, operating rooms and the emergency departments at UW Health.

More about the specific roles:

- Emergency Department RNs provide care in urgent medical scenarios, requiring a wide range of knowledge and skills. ED RNs practice in a fast paced, ever changing environment. Some duties include triage, focused assessments, medication administration, documentation, assisting with medical procedures and education.
- Operating Room RNs also known as a circulating nurse, is a registered nurse trained and educated in perioperative nursing who is responsible for coordinating and monitoring the nursing care and safety needs of a patient in the operating or procedure room and who also meets the needs of the operating room team members during surgery.
- Inpatient RNs care for patients throughout their hospital stay. Responsibilities include patient assessments, medication administration, treatments, interventions and patient and family education. Inpatient RNs are part of the multi-disciplinary team and are involved in the plan of care.
